WHO ARE NO.15 GREAT PULTENEY?

Located on one of the most exclusive streets in Bath, former temperance hotel, The Carfax, has been completely revamped into a luxury boutique townhouse, No.15 Great Pulteney. The boutique hotel has been transformed by owners, Ian and Christa Taylor, who together with Martin Hulbert Design have created an elegant and vivacious space with captivating contemporary art and playful lighting right in the heart of the city.

The project entailed opening a boutique hotel and Spa on Great Pulteney Street in Bath; the hotel has 40 guest rooms, restaurant, cocktail bar, separate coach house and private dining rooms. Timelines were tight and challenges included bringing modern technology into a traditional Georgian infrastructure with Grade 1 restrictions.

THE CHALLENGE

Systemagic were put in place to project manage the refurb. This included liaising with suppliers and contractors then establishing the requirements needed to provide all the technology that a modern hotel requires to run smoothly and efficiently.

"We selected Systemagic for a number of reasons,; our overall aim was to use local companies, we wanted a company who would offer sound practical advice and lead us through the project keeping the guest fully at the heart of our decision making.

The approach from Systemagic was always practical, they use language, which we could understand and offered at all times straightforward solutions to our challenges. I particularly liked their speedy response, pro-active style, their co-operation when our timelines and deadlines changed, but most importantly their friendly approach and ease of doing business with. Where we needed extra support and sometimes out of normal hours help, they were always on hand."
